Retail in British Columbia

If you're looking to enter the cannabis retail market in British Columbia, we're here to tell you everything you need to know, from securing the necessary licences, to getting your store up and running.

Secure your Licences and Authorizations

Cannabis retail in British Columbia is regulated by the Liquor and Cannabis Regulation Branch (LCRB). The LCRB licenses and monitors private non-medical cannabis retail stores.

The BC Liquor Distribution Branch (LDB) is the sole wholesale distributor of non-medical cannabis in British Columbia. The LDB is the government retailer of recreational cannabis in the province and operates public cannabis stores as well as the sole online e-commerce in the province through the brand, BC Cannabis Stores. Retailers in the province are not permitted to purchase any cannabis products directly from licensed producers or any other source other than the LDB.

Those interested in operating a private cannabis retail store in British Columbia must obtain a licence to do so. There are 2 non-medical cannabis licences offered in British Columbia:

1. Cannabis Retail Store Licence

A non-medical cannabis retail store licence allows licensees to sell non-medical cannabis and cannabis accessories in B.C. Licensees can only sell federally approved cannabis products.

2. Cannabis Marketing Licence

A marketing licence allows marketers to promote the products of licensed federal cannabis producers to licensed cannabis retail stores and people over 19-years-old.

"Cannabis License Experts, and their team were retained by our company to help us along the way with a Retail Cannabis License. Brian Wolf along with Kalpna Mistry and their team of experts were there the entire way through the process. At times, when we had questions as clients, their team was always available for support. I feel, without Cannabis License Experts' assistance in this endeavor, we would have been months behinds an already competitive process. "
